DIRECT PURCHASE OF NATURAL GAS DISCLOSURE STATEMENT AND APPOINTMENT OF AGENT ("AGENCY AGREEMENT")

If you choose to enter into an arrangement to purchase your natural gas supplies directly (Direct Purchase Arrangement), please read and understand the following legal document before signing. Your Utility and Agent will keep a copy of this document as an acknowledgement that you entered into the Direct Purchase Arrangement and understand the benefits and risks associated with the direct purchase of natural gas.

SECTION 1: DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

This document outlines the benefits and risks of entering into a Direct Purchase Arrangement. Please initial beside each point once you have read and understood each point of the following:

- 1. Savings: Although the purpose of direct purchase is to lower my cost of gas, savings are not guaranteed. I understand that savings relate only to the cost of the gas portion of my bill and not transportation or distribution charges. I further understand that a number of factors affect my savings such as the cost of my new gas supply, the gas costs and administration fees charged by my Utility, the quantity of gas used and fees charged by my Agent. I understand that my Agent estimates my first year net savings will be $ _____.
- 2. Contracts: I understand that upon implementation of a Direct Purchase Arrangement, my Agent will enter into various contracts on my behalf which will be binding on me. These contracts, which are required to complete the Direct Purchase Arrangements, will include the supply of gas from non-Utility sources and may include the transportation of the gas from the supply sources, the sale of that gas to the Utility, and the purchase of that gas by me, from the Utility.
- 3. Supply Security: I understand that I am authorizing my Agent to directly obtain my natural gas. Where applicable my Agent's supply will be subject to certain minimum conditions of supply and will replace the current Utility supply. In the event of a disruption to my direct purchase supply, the Utility will seek an alternative supply, but cannot guarantee the price which may be higher than it would otherwise have been with the Utility. I will be required to reimburse the Utility for higher costs resulting from alternative supplies.
- 4. Responsibilities: I understand that when I appoint an Agent, I will likely join others in a group direct purchase agreement. The group will be collectively responsible for the actions of its Agent.
- 5. Brochure: I have received and read the Guide to the Direct Purchase of Natural Gas brochure approved by the British Columbia Utilities Commission and have read all sections of this form, including the back page.

DIRECT PURCHASE OF NATURAL GAS GET THE FACTS AND MAKE AN INFORMED DECISION

Deregulation of the natural gas industry provided the opportunity for Gas Users to contract directly with a gas supplier to acquire their own gas requirements rather than having gas sourced by their Utility. Since deregulation, direct purchasing has become a recognized alternative for Gas Users to acquire their gas supplies.

Since the gas industry is very complex, many Gas Users who have decided to enter into a direct purchase arrangement, choose an "Agent" to act on their behalf and rely on that Agent to be knowledgeable of the gas industry and to act in the Gas User's best interests. The Agent will likely include you in a group with other customers under one direct purchase agreement.

The Agent will enter into a series of contracts on your behalf which will typically include the purchase of your natural gas directly from a producer, marketer or broker, the transportation of your gas on a pipeline system such as Westcoast Energy or Pacific Coast Energy, the sale of your gas to the "Utility" (i.e. BC Gas Inc./Pacific Northern Gas Ltd./Centra Gas British Columbia Inc./Squamish Gas Co. Ltd.) and the purchase by you of gas from the Utility. Contractual practices and obligations may vary among the Utilities. These contracts are collectively referred to as a "Direct Purchase Arrangement" and are binding on you, the "Gas User".

This is not a gas utility "rebate program". It is a long-term contract that takes away the right and obligation of the Utility to supply you with gas and gives that right to an Agent. A direct purchase involves possible business risks along with the potential benefit of lower cost natural gas.

When you sign an Appointment of Agent to enter into a Direct Purchase Arrangement, you are legally giving authority to an Agent (individual or company) to acquire gas for you from a source other than the Utility. Your signed contract makes you responsible for the decisions made by your Agent on your behalf, with respect to the Direct Purchase Arrangement.

Gas marketing agents represent independent companies which are not affiliated with the Utility in any way. The activities of agents, unlike those of the gas Utility, are not regulated by a government body. The role of the British Columbia Utilities Commission is limited to requiring that an Agent be licensed and bonded, adopt an approved code of conduct and use approved forms of agency agreement and information guide. Disputes under the Direct Purchase Arrangement would be resolved by the courts.

The Utility is financially unaffected by your decision to enter into a Direct Purchase Arrangement for your natural gas needs. This is because your Utility earns its income from the delivery of the gas and not from the resale of the commodity itself. Under a Direct Purchase Arrangement the delivery charges remain the same and you will continue to receive your regular gas utility bill as usual from your Utility. This bill may be adjusted if the Direct Purchase Arrangement causes the Utility to incur additional costs.

The front of this Agency Agreement contains two sections which are equally important for you to read and understand before entering into a Direct Purchase Arrangement.

- 1. Disclosure Statement: It is important that you review the Disclosure section. Feel free to ask your Agent and Utility any questions that will help clarify the points. Your Agent and your Utility will keep a copy of your signed acknowledgement as confirmation that you entered into the Direct Purchase Arrangement fully understanding its benefits, risks and obligations.
- 2. Appointment of Agent: The Appointment of Agent is a legal document which binds you to the Direct Purchase Arrangement for the term stated within it. Sign this document only if you have read it, understood it, and agree to accept its obligations.

The provincial Consumer Protection Act provides for a buyer's right of cancellation within 7 days where a direct seller, solicits, negotiates or concludes a contract at a place other than at the direct seller's place of business. The contract may be cancellable in certain circumstances after the 7 day period. You may wish to obtain legal advice to determine your rights.

The decision is yours. Your Agent and Utility want you to understand the risks and benefits so that you can make an informed decision.

These are residential and commercial customers who use gas mainly for space heating.

In January 1993, the British Columbia Utilities Commission (the Commission) held a public hearing to determine whether the ability to purchase natural gas directly was in the interests of core market gas customers. Subsequent to these hearings, the Commission concluded that, effective May 1, 1993, every gas consumer is eligible to opt for direct purchase of natural gas providing that certain contracting and supply conditions are met to ensure comparable conditions with utility system gas supply. Answers to Important Ouestions

What services am I currently receiving from my natural gas utility?

As a customer of your local gas utility, natural gas is purchased on your behalf by the gas utility and then delivered to your premises. The utility also provides operations and maintenance service, reads your meter, and bills you for natural gas consumed at prices approved by the Commission.

Gas utilities earn income only for the transportation and distribution of natural gas to their customers, not from the sale of gas. If you choose to purchase natural gas directly from a supplier rather than from the utility, the utility's income will not change because the transportation and distribution fee remains the same. You will still be a valued customer of your local natural gas utility and will be able to count on the utility for the same level and quality of service as you currently receive.

What is Direct Purchase?

rather than having gas sourced by their utility: rather than having gas purchased for them by their utility. As the natural gas industry continues to be deregulated, Direct Purchase (or "Buy-Sell") provides the opportunity for natural gas users to contract directly with a gas supplier rather than having gas sourced by their utility. Since the natural gas industry is very complex, a gas user who has decided to enter into a Direct Purchase arrangement, often chooses a broker to act on his or her behalf. The broker will enter into a series of contracts which will typically include the purchase of natural gas directly from a producer or marketer, the transportation of gas on a pipeline system such as those operated by Westcoast Energy or Pacific Coast Energy and the sale of your gas to the utility (i.e. BC Gas Inc./Pacific Northern Gas Ltd./Centra Gas British Columbia to act on his or her behalf. to act for them. , a gas user who has ., gas users who have Inc./Squamish Gas Co. Ltd.) The local gas utility will still distribute the natural gas purchased for you by the broker, and will continue to provide all services currently available to you such as billing, meter reading and customer service.

Under a Direct Purchase ("Buy-Sell")arrangement, you will continue to receive a bill from the gas utility. If the broker realizes savings in arranging for your purchase of natural gas, you should receive a periodic payment from the broker representing a portion of the savings.

What is a natural gas broker?

A natural gas broker, also known as a natural gas agent or marketer, is an individual or company who brings together buyers and sellers of natural gas. A broker offers services related to negotiating the purchase and delivery of natural gas to your home or place of business. The activities of brokers unlike those of the gas utility, are not regulated by a government body. Brokers do not represent your local natural gas utility.

What purchase options do I have?

There are now two options for the purchase of natural gas. As a customer of your natural gas utility, you may continue to have your natural gas purchased for you by the utility. Continuing this arrangement requires no action or notification from you. Your second option is to enter in to a Direct Purchase agreement with a natural gas broker.

Will Direct Purchase benefit me?

Direct Purchase may be a favourable option for some, but not necessarily all natural gas customers. Savings are possible, but not guaranteed. However, as with any business arrangement, the risks and benefits should be taken into account and analyzed relative to your requirements.

What are the benefits of Direct Purchase?

You may realize some savings through Direct Purchase of natural gas if a broker is able to negotiate natural gas supplies directly from a producer at a lower price than the average price your gas utility is currently paying. Your savings are a matter to be negotiated between you and your natural gas broker.

What are the risks?

It is important for you to carefully consider:

• Security of supply

on your behalf as part of its baseload supplies. on your behalf as part of supplies for its sales customers When you sign a Direct Purchase contract you are, in effect, responsible for obtaining your own natural gas supply, including providing for the processing and delivery of this supply to your local gas utility. Your local gas utility will cease to purchase natural gas on your behalf as part of its baseload supplies. Your broker will be required to arrange a gas supply which meets the conditions for supply to core market customers. If your broker fails to deliver your natural gas to the gas utility distribution system, your local gas utility will do its best to arrange a replacement supply. You will be responsible for any additional costs of this higher priced replacement gas, if such gas is available. The utility will bill you for any additional costs.

• Price

Future natural gas prices paid by either the utility or broker are uncertain and cannot be guaranteed. The relative price differential between the price paid by the utility and a broker may change at any time. Savings will depend on whether your broker is able to negotiate a price and terms which are better than the average price and terms of the natural gas utility. In some circumstances it may be possible that the price paid by you for natural gas could be higher than the average price paid by the utility; if that occurs you will be responsible for the higher price. Your contract with your broker will specify your responsibility if that occurs.

• The Direct Purchase contract

You will be required to enter into an agency agreement if you decide that Direct Purchase is right for you. That agreement authorizes your agent to enter into contracts on your behalf; you will then be party to these contracts as if you had actually signed those contracts yourself.

You as a prudent consumer should ensure that the broker, through contractual negotiations, attempts to minimize all risks to you and is prepared to take legal action to protect you.

ALL RISKS RELATED TO THE COST OF SUBSTITUTE SUPPLIES AND TO THE CONTRACT WITH YOUR BROKER ARE YOUR RESPONSIBILITY.

How can a broker save me money on natural gas?

The broker will arrange for you to purchase your natural gas supplies and for you to sell this gas to the utility at the utility's average price. Natural gas brokers may be able to arrange to purchase your gas at a price lower than the average price that the utility purchases its natural gas supplies. A difference between the utility average price and the price which the broker negotiates for you is the basis for the rebate offered by brokers. Here's how it typically works:

Example:
Your purchase price (as arranged by broker)	$1.60/unit
Your selling price to the gas utility (utility average price)	$1.75/unit

Difference

$0.15/unit

Some portion of the difference between your purchase price and the selling price to the gas utility is offered to you in the form of a rebate. For this example, a figure of 50% (your share of the total savings) will be assumed.

If you use 120 units of natural gas per year, the annual rebate might be:

120 units x 0.15 difference/unit x 50% = 9.00 savings per year

This example does not necessarily represent current natural gas prices or expected savings. Your savings will vary depending on the price and terms you have negotiated and how much natural gas you use. Be sure you fully understand the savings after accounting for any broker costs.

Can I cancel a contract with a broker?

A contract with a broker can be cancelled without penalty within seven days after it is signed. Following that period, contracts may only be cancelled in accordance with the conditions of the individual contract. You should understand these conditions before signing any contract.

Can I go back to my utility natural gas supply after my contract term expires?

Yes, but with conditions. If you have entered into a Direct Purchase arrangement and then wish to return to gas supplied by your utility, you may be required to give up to one year's notice of your intentions to the utility. The utility will make every effort to secure your natural gas supply at minimum cost but any incremental costs will be borne by you, the returning customer.

What is the role of the local natural gas utilities?

The natural gas utilities maintain a neutral position as to whether you arrange for a broker to purchase gas on your behalf or you continue to have the gas utility purchase your gas. The utilities will facilitate your Direct Purchase should you choose that energy supply option and try to present you with correct and current information that will help you make an informed decision. However, it is not the role of the utilities to make that decision for you.

How do I find a natural gas broker?

Phone the Direct Purchase Hotline that pertains to your location to obtain a list of natural gas brokers licenced in B.C. The telephone numbers can be found at the end of this brochure.

What should I look for in a broker?

Feel free to ask your broker any questions. You are not obligated to enter into a contract with a broker. The following tips may help you with your decision:

- Ask the broker for a list of current clients to determine whether the broker's "track record" is sound.
- Check to see if the broker is licensed and bonded as required by the Commission.
- Ensure that your broker has competently addressed all Provincial Sales Tax and Goods and Services Tax issues relevant to you.
- Comparison shop. Talk to several brokers and discuss the following matters to help you decide which broker is prepared to give you the best terms in your agreement:
 - all fees and costs, including up-front fees, annual administrative charges and other charges
 - amount and frequency of savings
 - documentation to support stated savings
 - guarantees are there any and what are the terms
 - indemnification indemnification of the cost of higher priced replacement supplies.
 - contract terms in the event you move from your premises to another location within your area, within B.C. or outside B.C.
 - contract termination procedures and restrictions
 - length of contract
 - the broker's gas suppliers, supply locations and transportation arrangements (fully understand their responsibilities and yours)

And finally ...

Natural gas utilities and the Commission recommend that you understand the potential benefits, risks and obligations associated with Direct Purchase agreements. Ensure that you fully understand all terms and conditions of any contract you are considering before you sign it. The decision to enter into a Direct Purchase agreement is yours. Ask questions of your broker if any aspects of Direct Purchase are unclear to you.
